

Being a leader is about taking responsibility and being a role model to others in the Dojo. Helping with chores like ~~ontaking~~ taking trash out, making snack, and cleaning the restroom. Being respectful in the Dojo is a big thing and not touching others. In order to be a leader I need to be trustworthy. I want other kids to look up to me. I have ~~grown up~~ and seen other kids do it and that made me want to do it and so I made a goal and completed it. I wanted to make my Sensei and parents proud and getting to with classes. I get to help in the kids kamp with stuff and help them meet their goals. I want to be a leader so I can show other kids to be an example too.

Toby

2

I have to have patience in order to be self focus on my work. I have to show and tell other the right way of doing things around the dojo and everywhere else. I also have to be self disciplined which means to be concentrated even when distracted. Other people should not have to remind you to do your jobs even if you forget you should still remember too. being a student leader has been one of my many goals in life that I have completed. my next goal in karate is trying to help others complete their goals and make them student leaders in Karate. I have to be dependable which means being on time to class, have my gi and equipment well that is all I have to say.